The Philosophy of Composition

2021-11-16

The Philosophy of Composition (1846) is an essay by Edgar Allan Poe, recognized as a foundational figure of nineteenth-century fiction. Poe has inspired generations of readers and writers with his craftsmanship and taste for tragedy and terror. His brief but meteoric career shaped the trajectory of American literature forever, forming a legacy without which science fiction, horror, and detective writing would surely be shells of themselves. Published only three years before his untimely death, the essay appeared in an April 1846 issue of Graham's American Monthly Magazine of Literature and Art, whose editor had previously made the mistake of turning down The Raven, both influential and controversial. Poe's essay on craft was intended as a dismissal of the myth of spontaneous art, arguing instead that a true artist depends upon attention to detail and adherence to a logical creative process. Using his own poetic masterpiece as an example, Poe claims that the writer must maintain unity of effect throughout the work. In order to inspire the intended emotional response in the reader, once this element has been set in place, the writer may proceed with the more technical aspects of composition, such as characters, setting, and plot. Although Poe's essay drew the ire of Anglo-American poet T. S. Eliot, it was immensely popular among Poe's Francophone audience and served as inspiration for such artists as Maurice Ravel and Charles the two cultures of english examines the academic discipline of english in the final decades of the twentieth century and the first years of the new millennium during this period longstanding organizational patterns within the discipline were disrupted with the introduction of french theory into the american academy in the 1960s and 1970s both literary studies and composition studies experienced a significant reorientation the introduction of theory into english studies not only intensified existing tensions between those in literature and those in composition but also produced commonalities among colleagues that had not previously existed as a result the various fields within english began to share an increasing number of investments at the same time that institutional conflicts between them became more intense than ever before through careful reconsiderations of some of the key figures who shaped and were shaped by this new landscape including michel foucault kenneth burke paul de man fredric jameson james berlin susan miller john guillory and bruno latour the book offers a more comprehensive map of the discipline than is usually understood from the perspective of either literature or composition alone possessing a clear view of the entire discipline is essential today as the contemporary corporate university pushes english studies to abandon its liberal arts tradition and embrace a more vocational curriculum this book provides important conceptual tools for responding to and resisting in this environment
